

24-hour drive raises £2,000

Suffolk digital marketing agency Itineris raised £2,210 for a children's charity by competing in a 24-hour karting fundraising challenge.

The Copdock-based agency, which specialises in website design, development and email marketing, raised the money through personal donations for Camille's Appeal, a charity that helps young children fight the long-term effects of treatment for brain tumours.

As part of their treatment, the youngsters are likely to undergo chemotherapy, surgery and radiotherapy and this can leave them with disabilities, making an independent life difficult. Camille's Appeal aims to help with the rehabilitation of such children.

Matt Horsup, head of sales and marketing, led a team of 10 from Itineris who drove a go-kart for 24-hours at Anglia Indoor Kart Racing in Ipswich.

He said: "This cause is extremely close to my heart as I personally know the parents who originally founded their charity, and their daughter Camille, who has a brain tumour. The race was pretty gruelling as we had to keep driving continuously in shifts but was for an extremely worthwhile cause."
